

SKI PORTILLO

Dear Friends of Portillo,

We wanted to update you on the current storm developing at Portillo. As of today (July 17), about 1 meter and 30 centimeters of snow has fallen, and another meter is expected in the next 24 hours.

Forecasts for next week indicate that snowfall will continue at a less intense but steady rate. Due to these conditions, it is highly unlikely that we will have any windows of good weather next week, which will prevent both ground and air access to Portillo.

Based on the information we have, we estimate that Tuesday, July 28, will be when the storm pauses and the earliest we could arrange access to the ski resort, either by road or by helicopter.

We are constantly monitoring the forecasts, and should anything change, we will provide timely updates.

We appreciate your understanding.

Miguel Purcell

General Manager

